How do I create a signature digitally?

Digital signatures require the use of public-key cryptography. If you are going to sign something digitally, you need to obtain both a public key and a private key. The private key is something you keep entirely to yourself. You sign the document using your private key—which is really just a kind of code—then you give the person (the merchant of the website where you bought something or the bank lending you money to buy a house) who needs to verify your signature your corresponding public key. He uses your public key to make sure you are who you say you are. The public key and private key are related, but only mathematically, so knowing the public key makes it possible to verify your signature without knowing your private key. In fact, it's nearly impossible to figure out your private key from your public key.
